Questions
1. What they are looking for when they hire (skills, behaviors, attitudes)? When we hire, we look for candidates who are reliable, respectful, and motivated to learn. For retail positions, good communication skills, a positive attitude, and a professional appearance are very important. We also value people who show honesty, punctuality, and a willingness to work in a team. If someone has previous experience in sales or customer service, that's always a plus.
2. For what types of jobs do you hire entry-level/recent graduates? We often hire entry-level workers for sales positions in the showroom, inventory assistants, and sometimes for administrative support. These roles don't require advanced experience and are good opportunities for recent graduates to start their careers and gain practical skills.
3. How many applications do you typically receive for a position at your level? For positions like sales or inventory assistants, we typically receive around 20 to 30 applications per opening. It can be more during peak hiring seasons like before holidays or when we're opening a new branch.
4. How much experience does an entry-level hire need? For entry-level positions, we don't require much experience. If someone has at least 3 to 6 months of relevant experience, that's great—but even fresh graduates or those with volunteer work are considered if they show the right attitude and willingness to learn.

5. How do you look for new employees? Do you use online job boards? Which ones? What other methods?

We usually post our job openings on Facebook groups, especially local job search pages. We also use WhatsApp business groups, and sometimes we announce openings through our current employees and their networks. We don't always use formal job boards Indeed unless we are hiring for higher positions.

6. Do you have a copy of your application form that I could use to review in my class?

Yes, we do have a basic application form that we give to walk-in applicants. Mr. Halloumeh said he would be happy to share a sample copy for class purposes. It includes sections for personal information, education, work experience, and references.
